WORKING A HOG.

How a Trio of Sharpers Skinned the Dignitaries of a Rural Town.

When I entered the village, situated among the hills of New York, at ten o'clock in the morning, all was peaceful and serene, and the pocket of every man who walked the streets had chink in it, writes a New York Sun correspondent. When I left, at four p. m., an excited mob had possession of the main street and every other man was dead broke.

About noon a man arrived from the north in a buggy. He said he was a drover, and looking for hogs. He bought half a dozen before he ate dinner, and it was astonishing how closely he guessed at their live weight. He was within two pounds on four of them, and only half a pound more on the others. These had been an attraction for a crowd of idlers, and the general verdict was that the drover was as sharp as a barber's razor. Soon after dinner a farmer-looking boy drove a hog into town, and staked him out in front of the tavern. As he wanted to sell and the drover wanted to buy, they soon came together.

"Might take him on a pinch, but he's only a nubbins," said the drover, as he sized the porker up.

"Nubbins! Why, that pig goes over 200 pounds!" exclaimed the owner.

"Can't stuff me, boy. I've been in the business twenty years."

"No one wants to stuff. That 'ere hog goes to 210."

"He does, eh! Wish your father had come in. I'd like to have made a bet with him. Boy, you ought to have better judgment. That hog won't pull down 180."

"Guess you are off, too," remarked a stranger who had quietly driven up in a buggy. "I've raised hogs all my life, and that boy hain't five pounds out of his guess."

"Ain't he! Raised hogs, have you! Ever raise any money!"

"A little."

"Perhaps you'd like to bet on that hog!"

"Perhaps."

"Have you got $20 as says he goes 200!"

"I have—fifty—a hundred!"

"Then let's chalk. Anybody can blow."

It was a chance to make a dollar, and the citizens improved it. The man in the buggy was an accommodating chap, and somehow or other the farmer boy managed to fish up about a hundred dollars from the hind pocket of his overalls. The citizens stuck by the drover, having abundant proofs of his judgment, and when every man in that town who had a loose dollar or could borrow one had made his bet the hog was driven to the scales and weighed.

"Gentlemen," said the drover just before weighing, "I was never deceived in my life. This hog won't go to 190 pounds."

"I'll take even bets that he goes over 200," replied the man in the buggy.

This bluff raked out the last nickel in the crowd, and the hog was driven upon the scales. The record was 211 pounds. He was weighed and reweighed, but the figures stood.

"Well, it's my first error in a hog," said the drover, and all bets were at once handed over. The farmer boy slipped out, the two men drove off in the buggy, and half an hour had elapsed before a church deacon, who had laid his ten with the drover and lost, suddenly declared that it was a put-up job to skin the town.

"Durn my buttons if it hain't," yelled two hundred men in a chorus, but it was too late. The town had been skinned, and the trio had escaped. All the mob could do was to turn loose and wreck an old vinegar factory and pass a resolution to the effect that liberty was a sham and a delusion

MASKS FOR DIAMONDS.

How Fashionable Women Protect Their Gems on the Streets.

A richly-dressed, handsome young woman attracted considerable attention in the box of a fashionable theater one evening this week. It was not her unusual beauty—for there were other ladies present who excelled her in personal charms—that made her conspicuous, neither was it due to any unusual deportment on her part. The whole claim upon fame rested in the magnificent solitaire diamond ear-rings she wore. As they caught the rays of the electric light they almost dazzled the eyes of the audience. There evidently was no paste about them. They were genuine stones and worth not less than $2,000 each. When the play had come to an end, a New York Mail and Express reporter who had observed the lady during the performance, saw her as she was leaving the building. He looked for the diamonds, but they were not visible. The setting of the stones remained the same, but in the place of the gems were two chased gold bulbs, such as any fashion-loving saleslady might have aspired to own.

"Looking for the diamonds?" asked the reporter's companion, who spent his days in a Maiden lane jewelry emporium.

"Yes. Has she changed her ear-rings?"

"No. She still wears them. She has merely covered them up with those gold masks. These contrivances are of recent origin," he explained, "and are becoming very fashionable. They are cheap and neat. They fit over the stones and hide them from view. By this means a lady can wear plain gold ornaments on the street, and the moment she reaches the play-house she can blossom out in the most gorgeous jewelry.

An Important Meeting.

Chairman (at the Ladies' Anti-Slang Society)—I have heard remarks made by members to the effect that, while it is doubtless a good thing to cultivate an elegant mode of expression, it is hardly important enough to meet in session over it. This is a great mistake, my sisters—a deplorable mistake. The woman whose speech is pure and free from slangy idioms has a perfect picnic.

WHALING BY ESQUIMAUX.

An Exciting Scene at Point Barrow, in the Northern Part of Alaska.

A letter from New Bedford, Mass., gives the following story of an intensely exciting scene witnessed by a whaleman at Point Barrow:

"I confess that I am a very poor sportsman," said George Leavitt. "I always felt that there was something diabolical in this sporting spirit, and it was not until I took charge of the whaling station at Point Barrow and saw an Esquimaux whaling scene that I was willing to admit that there was any thing but a bloodthirsty spirit back of this gaming. After seeing that, however, I willingly confess that there is one kind of sport that is truly possessed of gameness—a kind of sport where the danger is not all on one side.

"As a preliminary to all preparation the natives, headed by their medicine men, marched in solemn procession down to the beach, and with incantations, beating of drums and other ceremonies formally ushered in the spring. This done, there was no doubt in their minds but that whaling would soon be at hand.

"Every thing seemed to be unusually favorable for whaling that spring. There had been but few gales during the winter, so the ice was not massed together and jumbled up as much as usual. From our lookout we could command a view of the sea for miles, and none of the usual phenomena of ice jams could be seen.

"I went down to see Mung-gy the next day after he made camp and found him all ready for whaling, while none of the other natives had yet more than begun work. About twenty feet from the hut and on the very edge of the floe, he had built a chute of ice for his canoe. Day after day, from sunrise to sunset, he and his men stood watch for whales. He was in the head of the canoe constantly, ready for action, and armed with a harpoon, which was attached to a pole twenty feet long. The men were near by ready at an instant's notice to grasp the canoe by the thwarts and throw it, Mung-gy and all, at the whale.

"It was a week or two before there was a general breaking up of the north pack. But when disintegration once began the ice receded gradually, leaving a channel a mile or so wide along the edge of the grounded shore ice on which we were encamped. With the open water came signs of whales.

"Occasionally faint blows were heard. Now and then we could see spouts. But these forerunners were shy.

"Close behind these were larger whales, that migrated more leisurely. From my point on the lookout, with long glass in hand, I saw them coming, and I signaled it to my men. Mung-gy read it as quickly as they. I watched them make all preparations for action. Mung-gy gave his orders fast, and sandwiched in frequent anxious glances down the edge of the floe.

"He seemed so explicit in his orders and so deliberate in his preparation that I became anxious for the sequel.

"'B-l-o-w.'

"A whale appeared from behind a point of ice. 'B-l-o-w! b-l-o-w! b-l-o-w!'

"The pod seemed to be a large one, for many spoutings were seen and heard.

"On they came, nearer and nearer, rounding over lazily as they rose to spout and breathe.

"Four times the head one spouted; then, with a splash of the water with his flukes, he sounded.

"'How long will he be down? Where will he rise?' These must have been Mung-gy's thoughts. Certainly they were mine, and I was whaling with him in spirit, entirely oblivious of my own crews.

"There was a commotion in the water, and a huge, black object slowly rose out. It was in front of the chute, but too far away from any possible reach.

"Where would the next one rise?

"Within the shadow of Mung-gy's erect figure, which was cast upon the water, was a stir.

"He carefully poised his long harpoon and shook the coil of line in his hand.

"The men, with firm grasp on the thwarts, waited breathlessly.

"Slowly the whale rose out as he sounded to go down.

"Mung-gy shouted, but the men anticipated him.

"Like a flash he and the canoe were shot off the glassy surface of the chute at the whale.

"Such a splashing as there was!

"Mung-gy darted low and fastened his harpoon with the bunch of pokes attached to it into the whale.

"The men, shouting at the top of their voices, each took other harpoons and scattered up and down the edge of the floe.

"The instant the whale appeared another bunch of pokes was made fast to him.

"He rounded to go down, but the pokes rolled him over on his side, and before he could recover himself a third bunch was made fast. But as he disappeared he swept his flukes about, smashed the canoe, and spilled Mung-gy into the water.

"All the natives were insane with excitement, and they ran wildly up and down the edge of the floe, jabbing a sharp lance into the whale at every opportunity. As they worried him the water became dyed deeply with blood.

"At every rising of the whale it seemed as if Mung-gy was drowned. The canoe was thrashed about mercilessly by the whale's tail until only fragments were left for Mung-gy to cling to.

"At last, completely exhausted and worried almost to death by frequent lancings, the whale lay, buoyed up on top of the water by the pokes, and with a few more thrusts he rolled over—dead.

Mung-gy, now completely chilled through, and nearly drowned, was rescued. Work was soon begun on the whale, and by night, with all the natives working together, he was cut in and the blubber and meat dragged ashore by the cogs, where it was stowed away in caches, as the next winter's supply of food.

"I had become so intensely interested in this struggle that I had forgotten my own crew, and did not know that they, too, had caught a whale. But it was a tame affair compared to the other, for the men sailed in a whaleboat out to the whale, put two bombs into him and rolled him over dead without a struggle."

Of hot milk as a stimulant the Medical Record says: "Milk heated to much above one hundred degrees Fahrenheit loses for a time a degree of its sweetness and density. No one who, fatigued by over-exertion of body or mind, has ever experienced the reviving influence of a tumbler of this beverage, heated as hot as it can be sipped, will willingly forego a resort to it because of its being rendered somewhat less acceptable to the palate. The promptness with which its cordial influence is felt is indeed surprising. Some portion of it seems to be digested and appropriated almost immediately, and many who now fancy they need alcoholic stimulants when exhausted by fatigue will find in this simple draught an equivalent that will be abundantly satisfying and far more enduring in its effects."

5 O'CLOCK EDITION.

IN his article on "Slavery in Africa," in the June Scribner, Professor Henry Drummond (the author of "Tropical Africa") says: "Do not let it be supposed that this horror is over, that this day of tribulations is at an end. This horror and this day are now. It is not even abating. Slavery is on the increase. Time, civilization, Christianity are not really touching it. No fact in relation to the slave trade is more appalling than this. The fact of this increase, for a time denied, then doubted, has at last been reluctantly admitted, even by the Government of England."

THERE is every indication that the Congress of American Nations, which is to be held in Washington next October, will be successful and profitable to all concerned. The interest in the matter is great, judging from the number of acceptances already at hand. The New York Tribune thinks that nothing but good can come of an interchange of views, even if no definite policy is agreed upon. The result of the congress will be a closer bond of union between the republics of the western hemisphere.

THE Canadian Government is made happy by the announcement that the British Government is going to build some forts at the entrance of Puget Sound, as a defense against the wicked men of the United States. To build a fort these days of dynamite, is a delicate undertaking. No fort, other than a great hole in the ground, is of any consequence against a dynamite gun. That is no fort built on the old Gibralter plan. Gibralter itself couldn't stand a dynamite fusilade.

THE poet, Walt Whitman, will be 70 years old on Saturday next. A dinner in his honor will be given at Camden. Among those who will probably be present are Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, Mark Twain, E. C. Stedman and others of equal prominence.

CHICAGO wants a machine for deodorizing divorce suits. The Baltimore American suggests that chloroforming the witnesses might do.

A HEAVY LOAD.

Italy's Debt Increasing and Revenues Decreasing.

Italy has relatively the heaviest debt in the world. While the debt of Germany is 14 per cent in relation to revenue, of England 26 per cent, and of Russia 35 per cent, that of Italy is 38 per cent. The indebtedness during the years between 1861 and 1886 was phenomenal, the public debt alone rising from £120,000,000 to £520,000,000. Besides this there is an interest-bearing mortgage debt of £310,360,000, a communal debt of £35,320,000, and a provincial debt of £6,880,000, the whole showing the enormous total of £872,560,000. This involves a yearly charge of something like £38,000,000 for interest, a crushing burden for a country so unprosperous financially as Italy. The discouraging feature in the case is the fact that revenue is diminishing rather than increasing.

A New Feature of the next Census.

The census of 1890 will furnish information which no other Federal census has yielded relating to the recorded indebtedness of the people. The idea is to present statistics showing the extent of the private indebtedness and the form in which it exists—namely, whether in real estate or mortgages, debts otherwise secured, or in general indebtedness through notes and bills payable.

Costly Trappings.

The trappings intended to envelop the horse Spokane, which Spokane Falls City is to present to the winner of the Kentucky Derby, have over $200 worth of silver in the ornamentation.

Severely Burned.

Miss Zeeta Kreeger, a school teacher at Sacramento, was terribly burned Monday, her clothes catching fire from a spark while lighting a kitchen fire. Her sisters, Lettie and Lillie, were severely burned in giving aid to their sister.

Six Robbers Arrested.

Six men in all have been arrested for robbing Paymaster Wham. The evidence gathered by these arrests is strong and corroborates many facts heretofore obtained.

It should be generally known that Dr. Henley's Dandelion Tonic insures a hearty appetite and increased digestion, dispels nervous depression and low spirits, overcomes lack of energy and wakefulness, and will infuse new life and strength into the weakest invalid. Sold by William Pinniger.

The Cronin Case.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Several important links in the evidence concerning the circumstances surrounding Dr. Cronin's death were brought out by the jury yesterday. Milkman Mertes testified that shortly after he saw a man resembling Cronin go up the steps of the cottage, he heard sounds like pounding and crunching. Young Carlson, whose parents own the blood-stained cottage, learned from a Swedish truckman who brought the furniture to the cottage that it came from the rooms at 117 Clark street, opposite Dr. Cronin's office. A description of the man who bought this furniture and took it to 117 Clark street is now in the hands of the police. Young Mrs. Carlson gave a close description of the man who hired the cottage.

The coroner's jury met this morning, and without taking any testimony, adjourned until Monday.

The attorney sent to Toronto by Dr. Cronin's friends to see C. S. Long, the newspaper correspondent who wrote the fictitious interviews with the doctor, has returned. Long was laboring under a great nervous strain, but could not be brought to confess, in spite of the fact that Cronin was dead, that the alleged interviews were not genuine. While the attorney was in Toronto he met "Billy" Starkey, the attorney who left Chicago to escape going to the penitentiary for jury bribing. Upon investigation he found that Starkey and Long, who were professional shorthand writers in Chicago six or seven years ago, were on terms of friendly intimacy, and that about the time the fictitious dispatches were wired to Chicago they were in daily consultation. From this he deducted the conclusion that Starkey had a hand in concocting the dispatches. He knew Cronin as well as Long, if not better, for he was engaged in an effort made to compel Cronin to make certain statements before a Justice of the Peace in a fictitious suit put on record by the doctor's enemies.

Presidential Appointments.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The President has appointed John B. Cotton of Lewiston, Maine, Assistant Attorney-General, vice Robert A. Howard, resigned. He will have charge of all Government business before the Court of Claims.

Mrs. General Sheridan, who has been ill for a day or two, is reported better to-day.

The President has appointed Orlow W. Chapman of New York, Solicitor-General.

Latest Mexican News.

CITY OF MEXICO, May 29.—It is rumored that Congress in a secret session is discussing the question of ceding Lower California to the United States. It is believed, however, that the rumor is groundless and merely a strategem of the Conservatives.

The Senate has approved a proposed extensive colonization contract with Senor Ramirez Varela, offering him a cash bonus for bonafide immigrants for the States of Vera Cruz, Chiapas, Tabasco and Oaxaca.

Through connection via the Mexican Central railroad with San Luis Potosi will be completed by June 15th.

Petroleum has been discovered on the Ramirez Varela lands.

No Well-Defined Line.

OTTAWA, May 29.—The miners are flocking into Yukon mining district in large numbers, and the demarkation of the boundery line between Alaska and the British possessions becomes more necessary daily, as the jurisdiction of the American Government there is in question, many claiming that the territory is British soil. The Canadian Government for a year or two past has been pressing the American Government to join with it in settling the disputed question. The cost of demarking the frontier was estimated at between $1,500,000 and $4,000,000.

Auction Sale of Flannels.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The great auction sale of flannels was continued this morning, with a very large attendance. The prices realized at the opening did not quite come up to yesterday's average, which was about five per cent. in advance of the prices in the corresponding week last year. The first lots offered averaged about the same as a year ago. Twilled Nicholson blue flannel fetched 17¼ to 24 cents per yard; scarlet mixed, 12 cents; twilled blue, 11 cents, and the lower rate 10 cents.

Parnell Commission.

LONDON, May 29.—Maurice Healy, M. P., was before the Parnell Commission to-day. He admitted that the Cork branch of the League received application from other branches for a list of merchants who were members of the League, in order that other merchants might be boycotted. Healy held that it was legitimate to place a pressure upon shop-keepers.

Joseph Bigger, M. P., testified that he had been a member of the Supreme Council of the Fenian Brotherhood, but had been expelled in 1877 for advocating constitutional action. He joined the Land League in 1879. He declared that the meaning of the speech he made at Cork in the Spring of 1880, in which he referred to the Anarchist Hatsmann as having imitators in Ireland, had been misunderstood. As a fact, he only warned the supporters of the Whig candidates of the disgust of the people which was likely to result in the use of dynamite. In a subsequent speech at Castletown, he advised the people to take care that the land should be of no value to the land-grabbers. He further said it was no part of the League's duty to recommend the shooting of landlords, but that it was its duty to defend anybody charged with shooting landlords or their agents. He said that because no confidence was placed in the administration of the law, he held that the League ought to defend the prisoners whose crimes were the outcome of bad laws. He and Patrick Egan were the Trustees of the funds of the League. He could not associate either Egan or Sheridan with outrages.

Biggar said he contributed nothing to the Fenian funds. His object in joining the Brotherhood was to obtain its assistance in the Parliamentary elections. Sir Henry James, counsel for the Times, cross-examined Biggar. Witness said he never took part in the work of the League's treasury; never drew a check or saw a bank-book; was naturally indolent and left the work to others. He did not know where the record of the money dealings of the League was kept, nor did he ever know why he had been associated with Egan as Treasurer. Just before the suppression of the Land League most of the books were removed. Thirty-two books had been handed to Soames.

Presiding Judge Hannen remarked that this was the first time he had heard about these books.

Sir Henry James said it was a mistake, as there were no such books in Soames' possession.

Biggar said all the important books of the League had been removed to England, and that they were very bulky. He did not know that any of the books had been destroyed, and he has not the slightest notion of what became of the missing documents.

The Old Board Re-elected.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The Pacific Mail stockholders held their annual meeting in this city to-day and re-elected the old directors. The annual statement shows that the company earned in the year ending April 30th $4,161,057, an increase of $82,510 over the earnings of the preceding year. The expenses of operating were $2,666,160, an increase of $54,469. The report states that the only steamer now in the course of construction is the Chian, which will fly a foreign flag, and will be launched in a few days. George Gould, referring to the matter, states that she has been built for one third less than the price quoted by the American builders.

Irish Politics.

LONDON, May 29.—The Earl of Zetland has accepted the Viceroyship of Ireland.

A deputation appointed by a meeting of Unionist members of Lords and Commons, held recently at the residence of the Marquis of Waterford, called on Lord Salisbury to-day, and presented a petition asking for the abolition of the Viceroyship of Ireland and the transfer of its functions to the Secretary of State. Replying to the address of his petitioners, Lord Salisbury promised to give the matter his earliest consideration.

To be Looked Into.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Wardner Van Nostarand, a brother of one of the American ladies arrested in Mentone, France, at the instigation of a milliner, at the Department of State this morning made a formal statement of the case, which contained nothing in addition to what has already been published. The papers have been filed, and the Department will look into the case.

Professor Pasteur's Remedies.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Consul-General at Sydney, Australia, in his report to the Department of State, says a disease known as anthrax, or splenetic apoplexy, which for so many years has been devastating the herds of New South Wales, is in a fair way of being effectually checked by Pasteur's system of inoculation.

To-day's Races.

GRAVESEND, May 29.—The first race, six furlongs, Glory won, Salerna second, Æolian third. Time, 1:14¾.

The second race was a walkover for Inspector B.

The third race, five furlongs, Tormentor won, Grammercy second, Bill Letcher third. Time, 1:02½.

Another Street-Car Murder.

Special to the GAZETTE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—Mrs. Kramer, living near the Odd Fellows' Cemetery, was run over and killed this morning on Point Lobos avenue by a steam train running on the Geary street extension. The body was badly mangled.

Unprecedented Rainfall.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 29.—A hurricane extending over an extensive range of the coast has prevailed four days. The rainfall was never equaled. Railway traffic has been suspended, as there have been many landslips and a number of lives lost.

Thought to Have Been Drowned

KINGSTON, Ont., May 29.—The schooner Bavaria went ashore yesterday. The crew, numbering eight, took to the boats and have not been seen since. It is believed they were all drowned.

High-Priced Breweries.

DETROIT, May 29.—The sale of Edward W. Voight's brewery, the largest in the city, to an English syndicate, has been consummated. The consideration is $1,000,000.

NEW YORK, May 29.—George Bechtel's brewery on Staten Island has been sold to an English syndicate for $1,750,000.

A Severe Frost.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., May 29.—Great damage was done by last night's frost in this vicinity. Nearly all the young plants in the gardens were withered to the ground and grape vines were badly frosted as high as six feet from the roots.

Bar silver, 91⅝.

A Terrible Fate.

There is a man in Milwaukee who is preparing for something even more terrible than death—insanity. He will be violently insane in a few weeks, and he knows it. Some time ago his skull was fractured; a gristle is fast forming about the cracked edges, which will surely press upon the brain and make him a maniac. He talks calmly and rationally of his approaching fate, and spends every moment of his brief term of sanity in making provisions for his family when he shall no longer be able to care for them.

Clear the Way.

Without loss of time when the intestinal canal is blocked up by reason of constipation, chronic or temporary. It should be born in mind that this ailment is prone to become lasting and obstinate, and breed other and worse complaints. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the precise remedy to remove the obstruction effectually, but without drenching or weakening the blockaded bowels, a consequence always to be apprehended from the use of violent laxatives, which are among the most pernicious of the cheap nostrums swallowed by the credulous and misinformed. The fiat of experience, and of the medical fraternity, sanction the claims of this standard aperient. Not only as a resource of relief and permanent regularity of the bowels, liver and stomach, but as a means of remedying and preventing kidney and bladder troubles, and fever and ague, it is without a peer.

An Expression of Delight.

"About a week ago," says a Los Angeles, Cal., druggist, "a Chinaman came in with a lame shoulder. I sold him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and guaranteed that it would cure him. He came in again last night, and as soon as he got inside the door began to swing his arms over his head like an Indian club swinger. I thought the blamed fool had a fit, but he finally stopped long enough to say: 'Medicine velly fine, velly fine; allé same make me feel plenty good.'" Chamberlain's Pain Balm is without an equal for sprains, rheumatism, aches, pains or lame back. For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

In Three Days.

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done, if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert of New Brunswick, Ills.: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right today; and I would urge on everyone who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." For sale by Osburn & Shoemaker.

Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee the Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion, and oust Dyspepsia, and install instead Eupepsy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle by S. J. Hodgkinson, druggist.

Oregon is one of the most productive States in the Union. Its vast mineral regions contain gold, silver, copper, iron and coal. Its immense tracts of grazing lands support thousands of cattle and sheep, and its extensive agricultural regions produce all the cereals in abundance, the yield per acre being, in some instances, the largest in the world. Among the useful and valuable products of the Webfoot State may be mentioned Oregon Kidney Tea, which has proved a boon to thousands afflicted with pain in the back and kidney difficulties. It is purely of vegetable composition and never fails. Sold by William Pinniger.

EDITOR OF THE GAZETTE: Please announce in the columns of your valuable paper that we are sole agents for St. Patrick's Pills, the most perfect cathartic and liver pills in the market. They not only physic, but cleanse the whole system; purify the blood and regulate the liver and bowels; they are vigorous but gentle in their action, and can always be depended upon. For sale by Osburn and Shoemaker.

Answer this Question.

Why do so many people we see around us seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents we will sell them Shiloh's System Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them? Sold by Osburn & Shoemaker.

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life

It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time; she weighed less than seventy pounds. On a piece of wrapping paper she read of Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle; it helped her, she bought a large bottle, it helped her more, bought another and grew better fast, continued its use and is now strong, healthy, rosy, plump, weighing 140 pounds. For further particulars send stamp to W. H. Cole, druggist, Fort Smith. Trial bottles of this wonderful Discovery free at S. J. Hodkinson's.

THE FATAL CURRENT.

Preparations for the Execution of Kemmler, the New York Murderer.

A New York dispatch of the 26th instant contains the following interesting description of the new method of inflicting capital punishment on criminals:

The peparations for the killing of Joseph Kemmler at Auburn during the week beginning June 24th are progressing favorably. The proceedings on the day of the execution, so far as they are at present arranged, will be as follows: On whatever morning shall be decided upon in the week of the execution, the prisoner will be given an opportunity, if he desires, for religious consolation and farewell words. These over, just before the hour fixed for the execution, the officers will enter his cell and the death warrant will be read.

His shoes will then be removed and a pair resembling regular army brogans will be substituted. In the sole of these there will have been inserted a metal plate, covering the whole sole and connecting with wires passing out through the heels.

THE FATAL CAP.

While one officer is making this change of shoes, another will fasten the prisoner's hands together in front, and will place around his body, just below the armpits, a stout leather strap with a buckle fastening it in front and snap hooks projecting from each side at the back. Another officer will place upon the back of the prisoner's head a peculiar, close-fitting cap, apparently of black rubber, made around a small metal piece in the center. It will look somewhat as if made by taking a rubber football and, with a metal cap at the hole for the center, cutting off the end of the ball into a sort of hood. The cap will fit over almost the whole of the head from the base of the brain to well towards the forehead. Inside of it, in the center about the metal pieces, will be a spiral arrangement of copper wire about five inches in diameter, made to fit down over the part of the head that it will cover. The wires, just before the cap is placed on the person's head, will be covered with a sponge saturated with salt water.

A PRELIMINARY TEST.

While the arrangements are being made the prisoner will be sitting on a chair in his cell. This chair, not differing apparently from an ordinary one, but which is being made especially for the purpose, will be connected with wires leading to another room, and the prisoner will, without knowing it, be subjected to a current of electricity too light to be felt, but heavy enough to give an expert electrician in the other room an exact measurement, by the use of what is known as the "Wheatstone bridge," of the electrical resistance of the man.

From the cell the procession will be much as now to the execution room where the deputies and other persons permitted by law to witness the execution will be waiting. Near the center of the room, raised upon a small platform about eight inches above the floor, will be a large reclining chair. The long, straight frame that forms the slanting back will be of hard wood pieces, three inches square, and will be long enough so that if a seven-foot man should be in the chair his head would rest on the back. The seat and arms will be of plain wood and without any peculiarities. The upper part of the back frame on each side will be fitted with a slot, in which will slide back and forth a small arrangement with a ring at the top and thumbscrew beneath. The rings are to receive the hooks in the back of the belt about the man's body, and the screws are to fasten the arrangement in place at the spot where the rings will meet the hooks, which will vary according to the hight of the prisoner.

THE FOOT-REST.

In front of the chair will be a foot-rest something like those in a barber's shop, except that the top portion, instead of being fixed, will be balanced upon a pivot to permit it to dip front or back, so that the feet will lie firmly upon it. This whole foot-rest will be arranged to slide backward and forward, and is to be secured with a screw at the point where the prisoner's feet will rest upon it.

From the ceiling over the back of the chair and over the foot-rest will dangle two flexible wires, like those from which small electric lights swing. On the wall at one side will be a small round dial attached to a brass instrument. A band upon the dial will indicate the intensity of the current that will pass over the wires. Near it on the wall will be a small double-pole switch, a brass instrument similar to the familiar switches used to shut off or let on the current wherever electricity is used, but designed especially to show at a glance whether the current is off or on, in order to prevent accidents which carlessness in handling the apparatus might bring about.

THE EXECUTION.

The prisoner, immediately upon entering the room, will be led to the chair and in a moment will be pushed back into it, and the hooks in the belt about his body slipped into the rings in the chair, and there fastened in place by the turn of the screws. At the same moment his feet will be raised, the foot-rest slipped under them and fastened by a turn of the screw, and a strap on top of the rest will be buckled tightly over his ankles. In another moment the two dangling wires will be fastened, one to the metal at the center of the back of the cap and the other to the metal connection on the heel of each shoe. A black cloth will be pulled over the face of the prisoner, the officers will stand well back from the chair, and at a signal the executioner at the switch will turn on the current, the volume of which has previously been adjusted to suit the resistance of the prisoner, as shown by the test in the cell. The intention is to use a current of 1,000 volts, the same, it is said, as that used in the Westinghouse street-lighting.

THE DYNAMOS.

The principal parts of the apparatus, the machines for the generation of the current, were secured a good while ago, and have been laid away, waiting for the time to come to use them. They are ordinary Westinghouse dynamos for the generation of the alternating currents, which experiments upon dogs and other animals have shown to be peculiarly deadly in their effect. Probably if the dynamos had not been secured a good while ago there would have been some difficulty about getting them at all, for the Westinghouse Company, which makes them, is bitterly opposed to their being used for such a purpose, and said, when it was first announced that the alternating current had been decided on for use in execution, that it would sell no machine to the State.

MORE ABOUT THE SCHOOLS.

A "Gazette" Reporter Continues His Visit of Inspection.

A GAZETTE reporter continuing on his inspection tour of the Public Schools visited the primary classes of Miss McIntosh, Miss Short and Miss Unruh on Friday, but the fire broke into the time of the GAZETTE force and it was obliged to defer further visiting until this morning. On Friday's visit, however, he saw enough to convince him that in the three teachers named the public school system has three capable workers. That they are directing the younger and rising generation in the right paths there can be no doubt, and the GAZETTE expects to see many of them graduate from the High School with honor to themselves and parents, then enter the State University and come out polished men and women.

This morning he paid a visit to Miss Frankie Grippen's class on the South Side and found her busily engaged in teaching about 40 very bright little shavers how to change words by adding a letter, their meaning and giving a sentence in their own language with the word in it, and it was interesting and pleasing to note their answers, and if Miss Grippen don't send some bright scholars up to the higher grade at the next term then the GAZETTE is sadly mistaken. She is a thorough teacher and understands children so well that they can't help but learn under her tutorship.

BREVITIES.

Local and General Intelligence.

Spokane Falls claims a population of 24,000.

The public schools will have a holiday to-morrow.

The GAZETTE sold over 300 extra copies of its fire edition.

Chreighton, the San Francisco jury briber, is in Victoria, B. C.

Incendiary fires are said to be quite frequent in Tacoma, W. T.

Tramps do not regard Willows, Cal., as a healthy country for their kind.

PARTNERSHIP DECLINED.

Sam Davis Gets a Business Proposition From a New York Firm, Which He Rejects.

The Carson Appeal editorially says: A few days ago the editor of the Appeal was offered a partnership in a New York firm who were making $200,000 a year. The business was a light, easy business—that of manufacturing and passing counterfeit money.

We are getting too old in life to start in on any new business. If we had been offered such a chance about twenty years ago, when we belonged to the Democratic party, we might have jumped in and done well.

The man who wants us says that he has known the writer for some time, and that he has been very strongly recommended as specially adapted to making counterfeit greenbacks a howling success and running a safe, clean business.

He is also allowed to introduce a friend, with the idea of giving him a chance also. Any one wishing to get a chance at the business can be steered in by calling at this office. No capital required.

If any one in this city has received a circular from John Fox, 1222 Grand street, Hoboken, he had better steer clear of him. The last Carson man who went on to meet Fox was jumped on in a room by five men, and barely escaped with his life.

PERSONAL.

Stewart Hite is in from White Plains.

M. D. Foley came up from the Bay yesterday.

L. F. J. Wrinkle, the civil engineer, went below last evening.

Mrs. Alvaro Evans and son are visiting friends at Colfax, Cal.

S. L. Jones, Superintendent of the Crown Point mine, came up from below this morning.

Charley Colburn, a Comstock timekeeper, returned from below on this morning's express.

R. L. Fulton returned from a week's trip to Utah on last night's train. He reports Utah as looking fine—never better—and her people prosperous.

James Miller of Long Valley returnd this morning from San Francisco where he went to attend his sick wife, who has been very ill but is now much better.

Death of Mrs. Geo. Simpson.

Under the above heading last evening's Carson Tribune said: Mrs. Mary Parker Simpson, wife of George Simpson, died yesterday in Olympia, W. T. Deceased was a daughter of Major John Parker and niece of the late Hub Parker, and was well known in this city, where she had many friends.

She was also well known in Reno, where her husband was at one time engaged in the grocery business, and was afterwards an attendant at the Insane Asylum under Dr. Dawson.

Mr. Fitch Goes to Carson.

Yesterday's Carson Appeal says: Thomas Fitch will deliver two orations Decoration Day, the first at Reno and the other at Carson. Immediately after his oration at Reno, Hymers will hitch up his fastest team and drive Mr. Fitch to this city, where he must arrive at 8:30 in the evening, at which time he is to deliver his oration, the Carson Post having postponed its literary exercises until evening in order to have the pleasure of listening to the silver-tongued speaker.

Nevada's Resources.

Hon. Wm. Thompson has 10,000 copies of the "Resourses of Nevada" done up in wrappers ready for mailing, and anyone can get a copy by applying at his office. He has sent a large number to the San Francisco Board of Trade and to "California on Wheels" at the East, besides distributing them on the cars at Ogden. If you know of anyone seeking a home send them a copy.

Held to Answer.

Joseph Fisher and Charles Trask, the parties charged with breaking open M. Cooper's safe and taking $85, had their preliminary hearing yesterday and each was held to answer to the charge of grand larceny, and was committed in default of $1,000 bond.

SECRETS OF THE FACE.

The Impress of Occupation on the Human Countenance.

A man's occupation or condition has a good deal to do with his facial expressions, remarks the Herald of Health. Intellectual pursuits, like the studies of the scholarly profession, when coupled with temperate habits of life, brighten the face and give a person a superior look. Magnanimity of nature, or love of studies and art, will make a bright, glad face; but, contrary to this, a man may have a face that does not please everybody, because of the love of self to the exclusion of all others, notwithstanding his learning of worldly shrewdness. Soldiers get a hard, severe look; overworked laborers constantly look tired; reporters look inquisitive; mathematicians look studious; judges become grave even when off the bench; the man who has had domestic trouble looks all broken up. An example of the ludicrus side of the subject is to see a third-class lawyer stalking around a police court looking as wise as an owl. The business makes the face, I say. There's the butcher's face, the ministerial face, the lawyer's face, the doctor's face, the hoodlum's face, all so distinct each from the other and singly, that I seldom fail to recognize those callings showing the faces. And what city boy cannot recognize a genuine farmer's on the street, as a farmer, the moment he sees him?

Poetic License.

Referring to a recent effusion which appeared in the Austin Reveille, the Elko Independent says it contained "much poetic license."

A Fortunate Druggist.

Mr. Edwin W. Joy for many years and now a prosperous druggist on the corner of Stockton and Market streets in San Francisco, probably never dreamed of rivaling in wealth the medicine kings of the country. But various rumors having been floating around to the effect that he has struck it big, an Examiner reporter was detailed to unearth the cause, and after much difficulty unraveled the following story:

It seems that about seven years ago an English physician, a great student of botany, located in this city. His practice was not extensive, and yet the few cases that came to him attracted no little attention. His success seemed to be in the treatment of liver and kidney disorders, and vitiated blood. In fact his ability to cope with these common complaints was marvelous. He seemed almost infallible, and his quiet modest methods and his well-kept secret was as much a mystery as himself. After his departure about a year later Mr. Joy determined to fathom the secret, and copying all the prescriptions he had filled for the erratic doctor he began a systematic analysis. In his examination he discovered running all through the prescriptions for liver and kidney troubles, vitiated blood and stomach disorders a couple of vegetable extracts indigenous to California, so simple and so well known under homely every day names to every school boy as to entirely dissipate the suspicion that they were the active principles involved. So certain, however was Mr. Joy that he had discovered the secret, that he embodied the new elements in a preparation of Sarsaparilla to disguise the taste, and put it before his customers under the modest name of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. Immediately the same marvelous stories came back of its astonishing effects, and the mystery was solved, and the talk it has created has already caused it to step into prominence, and orders pour in daily from all over the coast. And thus another California industry leaps into existence.—S. F. Examiner.

It was maintained by the late Horace Greely, that "nothing succeeds like success!" If this be true, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will always be popular, as it never fails. It is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, and is undoubtedly the best and most reliable medicine in use for those diseases. It is decidedly a success. ### A PICTURE.

She made a picture fair to see,
This maiden young and sweet,
To gaze long on her features rare
Would bring me to her feet.

The lustrous brown of her rich hair,
The blue of her bright eye;
Almost would I my tale of love
Pour out, were no one by.

The peach-like bloom upon her cheek,
Her lips just ripe to kiss;
To fold her in my arms would be
The highest earthly bliss.

Her glance suggests coquettishness,
Her attitude repose;
Among her many charms she has
A dainty Grecian nose.

I wonder would that shell-like ear
Give heed to my warm vows;
I wonder would the maiden there
Become my loving spouse?

Oh! could I but my love pour out
At this fair virgin shrine,
The proudest moment of my life
Would be to call her mine.
Alas! this maid on canvas lives—
An artist's chaste design!
—E. L. Mumma, in Detroit Free Press.

THE LAGGARD LETTER.

Amusing Romance of the Lady of Æsthetic Tastes.

"Who could resist adoring him!" Beatrice thought, as she gazed on his far-away-looking eyes, his poetically long, wavy hair, and his, as she called it, "Raphael-like" face. Then, too, his name was so full of romantic suggestion—Francisco Wolfe-Browne.

To be sure, her brother, who was always teasing, insisted upon it that formerly the name was Frank W. Brown, and that the hyphen and other accessories, the long hair and imitation-of-Irving expression first appeared on his return from abroad.

Beatrice, or, as her brother would insist upon calling her, Bet, notwithstanding that she possessed a remarkably good constitution and the attractiveness which generally accompanies it, had an uncontrollable thirst for romance; and this æsthetic-poetical youth impressed her like an unopened volume of ancient legends in a most fascinating binding.

She was well content to play lawn tennis, and row and ride with her brother and his friend Bob in the mornings, but what a rest in the afternoons when Francisco called, to wander with him through the spring garden discussing ancient chivalry, reading modern poets, and looking for roses without thorns! And then his singing of old love songs!

To be sure his voice was not strong, but such feeling!—"Yes, always feeling for the high notes which are beyond his grasp," her brother said; he also added a criticism on the singer, to the effect that it was a good voice for calling chickens! Beatrice's only regret was that he accompanied himself on the banjo; it would have been so much more æsthetic to have played the light guitar or the Spanish mandolin.

During the summer Francisco sailed for foreign shores to seek inspiration among the artistic ruins for his idyllic poem. But frequent letters kept up the interest in Beatrice's sentimental mind.

To be sure, Bob was always around, wearing her out with his practical ideas and prosaic views; but then he was so convenient as an escort to social festivities that he had to be tolerated, and, after all, admiration is enjoyable even from an "every-day young man."

Mr. Francisco Wolfe-Browne returned with the birds in the spring, and Beatrice's afternoons were again the bright spots in her romantic calendar.

One day, just as the setting sun was concealing itself in a varied vestment of vermilion vapor, and from the silvery stream came stealthily creeping up the malaria-laden mist, Francisco gently took Beatrice's pink fingers in his fervid grasp, and in sublime language poured out his tale of unquenchable love.

Now, Beatrice might then and there have settled his fate, but her romantic nature could not be curbed. To have murmured "yes" right on the spot would have been entirely too prosaic; so, gracefully, half-reluctantly gathering herself together, she whispered that in the morning his answer he should find in the hollow tree.

Now it so happened that there was no hollow tree on the place, and Beatrice knew it perfectly well, but she hoped against hope that she might discover one; and that night after inditing a favorable reply bubbling with poetical effusions, she vainly sought for some gnarled and knotted oak. But their modern three acres contained nothing but painfully young and upright trees, and at last, in a fit of despair, she resolved to utilize an old tin watering-can which hung on a branch of a convenient sapling; so after some manipulation and maneuvering, with the aid of a garden-bench and a box, her love-letter was deposited.

How endless the night seemed! How eagerly she longed to hear the music of a light guitar and a silvery voice singing a touching melody under her latticed window!

As for Francisco, he was otherwise engaged, keeping an appointment with a chill, and in the quiet seclusion of his cheerful chamber he was busily shaking.

It rather detracted from the romance of the affair to be compelled, the next morning, to go herself and point out the location of the concealed missive.

All, however, would have doubtless passed off serenely but for the fact that she had been espied by her brother while depositing the letter, and he afterward, in a quiet, unostentatious way, innocently arranged things so that when Francisco, after climbing upon the boxes, proceeded to reach for the can, his crane-like neck received a large gallon of the wettest kind of water.

Unfortunately, Beatrice, being human, could not entirely repress a slight smile at the peculiar appearance Mr. Wolfe-Browne presented on gathering himself up out of the mud. This might have passed unnoticed in the excitement; but when her horrid brother put in an appearance, and commented on the fact that it was April 1st, this was too much for Francisco, and with a look of concentrated wetness he stalked into the dim future.

* * * * * * * *

Weeks passed. Mr. Francisco Wolfe-Browne no more appeared, while Beatrice's misery made her supremely happy. Here was real romance! She knew they loved each other devotedly, but true love always did run roughly, and this estrangement was simply a proof of their affection. To be sure, she was not deserted; her brother's friend Bob was always at hand for tennis, riding, or to take her canoeing in search of sketchable spots, while rumor reached her ears that Francisco was touching the light banjo at the feet of another shrine; and the summer birds and the new-mown hay filled the air with song and perfume.

She had no doubt that Francisco's misery was equal to her own, and that simply out of sheer pique he was pretending to interest himself in another divinity.

But what a contrast to his finely strung, poetical temperament was the matter-of-fact, almost jarring, practical mind of Bob! And how she disliked that name Bob! (His real name was Roberto, but he obstinately refused to answer to it.)

While canoeing one day, a common Japanese fan that she carried was blown into the water. Now, any man, she thought, of a chivalrous nature, any man but a practical, nineteenth-century creature, would have regained his lady's fan at all cost. To be sure, the canoe might have been upset; but then, what a romantic opportunity to save her life!

Instead of taking any of these chances, Roberto calmly watched the fan disappear, asked one or two questions about its value and history, and, as it vanished, quietly expressed his regrets.

The rest of the trip was marked by distinct coolness on her part.

How she longed for Francisco, with his chivalrous poetical instincts!

To be sure, the next day she received a box containing five beautiful fans; but that was small balm to her sentimental nature.

As they were going to the tennis-ground one morning Bob picked up, among the rose-bushes, what seemed to be a letter. Yes, she saw at a glance it was her unfortunately placed letter, intended for Francisco; and seizing it she was prompted by her romantic soul to save it, with the feeling that it would yet make Mr. Wolfe-Browne the happiest of men. (Luckily no personal names were mentioned in it, so if it had been perused by strange eyes no one would have been the wiser in regard to the writer.)

Sure enough, Beatrice and Francisco soon met again, at a rehearsal for private theatricals, and, after some explanations, she pressed—as she thought—the battered, weather-stained letter into his hands, and giving him a glance full of tenderest love, she fled.

What was her horror that night on discovering the letter still in her posession!

What could she have given him? A terrible suspicion came across her tender soul. Could it have been that bill from the hair-store, for new bangs? No! that missing memorandum re-appeared. But she failed to find one of the slips of paper on which was copied the speech she was to deliver in the play, when politely rejecting an unworthy suitor in these well-chosen words:

"Thou driveling knave, marry thee? Of a truth, if thou wast the only knight in the kingdom, never would I thee marry!"

There were other lines, all tending to prove that the knight's proposal did not entirely meet the lady's approval.

A dozen times she began an explanatory letter to him, and, twelve times she abandoned the idea.

Finally the date for the next rehearsal arrived, and with a palpitating heart Beatrice hastened to the meet.

The usual restfulness, quietness and peaceful order prevailed which characterize amateur theatricals on the first dress-rehearsal, and the costumes gave the customary satisfaction.

At last Beatrice espied the wavy locks of Francisco in a dim corner; evidently he was buried in revery.

In the din and confusion she stole quietly up behind him, and laying her pink fingers over his eyes, whispered: "Guess."

In a second her little hands were seized and covered with kisses, intermixed with a declaration of love in a torrent of eloquence. She suddenly realized it was not Francisco! No, it was Bob! in his stage wig and costume. Without one word she took to flight; her head whirled; her surprise at the proposal was even exceeded by her amazement at such sentimental eloquence from the matter-of-fact Roberto.

As for Francisco, that evening he pointedly avoided her; evidently the note he had received by mistake gave mortal offense.

There was one part in the play they were rehearsing, where she, as the beautiful Princess in the tower, passed a missive through her prison bars to a noble knight, for which role Francisco was cast.

This time her romantic mind again came to the front, and she conceived the idea of handing him the old, weather-stained, non-delivered letter of watering-pot fame. It was still legible, and how romantic it would be to have the faded epistle finally bring her love to her! And it did. She added a postscript: "I shall be in the conservatory after the rehearsal."

The scenes and accessories were as complete as is usual in amateur theatricals, but in trying the prison scene she found the barred window was so high she could only see the waving plumes of her trusty knight, who was supposed to steal silently by the casement, seize the note and fly. But with it all he found time to give her delicate finger-tips a warm, thrilling pressure, and though she could not see his face, she felt that Francisco had relented and love had triumphed.

In her picturesque garb of the imprisoned Princess, as soon as the scene was over, she hastened to the conservatory.

It so happened that the electric light, by which the rendezvous was illuminated, was that evening going through a series of eccentric flashes; and as she entered, snap!—and with a dull, heavy thud, total darkness fell. She had time to simply catch one glimpse of a stalwart knight crowned with waving plumes, and the next moment she was comfortably nestled in his protecting arms, and almost before a word was spoken a ring was slipped on the third finger of her left hand. Then, snap!—and up flashed the electric light, for an instant only; but what a revelation it was! In that one second she saw in a palm-sheltered nook, a "knight of ye olden time" on his bended knee, pressing the lily-white hand of a "ladye faire" to his lips, and the light shone full on his imitation-Irving features. It was Francisco! She then also recognized that the shoulder on which she had nestled, and the protecting arms by which she had been surrounded, belonged to Roberto!

She was glad darkness followed; it gave an opportunity to conceal, to a certain extent, her conflicting emotions.

She felt mortified at herself for not fainting, but instead of that it seemed as if she did a year's thinking in one moment; and she resolved that Roberto, for it was his ring that she was now wearing, should never be undeceived. And after all, the consoling thought came, it was awfully romantic!

She afterward learned that all this "Comedy of Errors" had arisen from the fact that a sudden change had been made in the cast, and Roberto had been assigned Mr. Wolfe-Browne's part in the prison scene, thereby receiving the weather-stained letter of acceptance.

Beatrice planned an exquisitely æsthetic wedding, and it must be confessed that, for a matter-of fact young man, Roberto submitted to the rehearsing and costuming angelically. For once the imitation-Irving Francisco was outdone. The fair damsel who had undertaken to rekindle his dampened affections was most unromantically stout. That much was triumph!

But, alas! having at last secured his sentimental darling, Roberto became recalcitrant, and, so to speak, kicked over the æsthetic traces. In spite of all his bride's efforts to induce him to give the Italian pronunciation to her name—Ba-a-tree-cha—he would persist in calling her "Betty dear!"—Will Phillip Hooper, in Demorest's Monthly.

He Took His Rank.

Piron, the poet, went only occasionally to grand dinners and large entertainments. He knew very well it was his wit which was invited; as he said, "They hire me on wages." He went everywhere without bending the knee. One day, at the house of some Marquis, whose name I have forgotten, a nobleman made way for him to enter the dining-room before him. The Marquis, observing this ceremony, addressed the nobleman: "Oh, my dear Count, don't be so ceremonious; he is only a poet." Piron repelled the insult like a man of spirit. He raised his head proudly, and went in first, remarking: "Since our titles are known, I take my rank."
